

Mady Roef is a ceramist sculptor who lives and works in Breidweiler (L). Each individual piece that she creates, is a handmade, unique piece created through calmness and intuition. Her sculpting process involves a combination of beading technique, sometimes press molds and the potter's wheel. The final form of each sculpture is never predetermined, but emerges intuitively during the process, which results in dynamic and organic designs. The artist deliberately chooses a monochromatic colour scheme, as this is intended to focus on material and form.